CHAINED SKELETON

Mystery Surrounds Bones in Philadelphia House.

FOUND BY A CONTRACTOR

Alterations Lead to Oueer Discovery Remains Those of a a human skeleton in a state of disintegration have been discovered in an attic of the long-abandoned house, 418 North M woman. One of the legs was clasped with a large iron ring, to which a heavy chain was attached. It was this chain that led to the discovery.

No. 418 has been a house of mystery for many years. It is a large four-story red brick of the old Philadelphia type. The attic is little more than an air chamber under the roof, without windows or ventilation of any kind. It reached through a small trap door in the ceiling of the fourth floor, which had been papered over.

Had Bad Name.

Old residents of the neighborhood remember that in the dim past 418 was occupied by a doctor, about whom little was known by the few families in the vicinity, who were on speaking terms with him. Later, the dwelling and its occupants had a bad name, and that is the reason it has stood so long tenant-

An insurance company purchased it recently, and contracted with "Squire" Dean, of Camden, to put a new roof on it, as a preliminary to making it habitable once more.

In looking over the roof Dean noticed that there was an attic under it, and after a search he found the trap door.

"I suppose I have a grain of romance dent, "but whenever I have anything to do with a queer old house like that I always look it over to see what I can find. The attic was very low, and when I first crawled into it I could not see at all.

The Right Printing. In looking over the roof Dean noticed

"It was so gloomy and forsaken that every time I made a sound it startled Building evidently no one had been there for many and many a year.

many and many a year.

"Finally, I saw a chain that dangled from a bole in the brick wall, disclosed by the rays of light that came through the little trap door. Making my way over the beams, I gave the chain a sharp pull. It fell into my lap, dragging with it the bones of a human foot and lower leg.

"It scared me, but after a while my nerve came back, and I made an examination of the hole. It opened into a sort of chimney, which seemed to have been closed a few feet down.

"I stuck my arm in and pulled out another foot, and then a leg bone, and by and by I had the skeleton complete up to the fifth rib.

Bones Were Crumbling

Bones Were Crumbling.

"There is no doubt that it had been there a long time, for the bones were soft and crumbly, and readily pulled out from the joints. I could not get the bones of the upper part of the skeleton. It will be necessary to tear down a part of the wall to get at them.

"I could feel with the tips of my fingers that there were more bones in the thole, and I am positive that the re-

"T could feel with the tips of my fingers that there were more bones in the hole, and I am positive that the remainder of the skeleton is there intact." "I put what bones I had in a pile on the third floor, and threw the chain and ring out into the backyard."

The story of Dean's adventure was soon noised about the neighborhood, and curious ones flocked to look at his find and hear him relate his experience. Among those who came was a policeman, who said: "I suppose the coronor ought to be told about this," but no one appeared from the coronor's office.

Looks Like Murder,

Doctors often have skeletons in their thouses, but they ahe not in the habit of swalling them up in the attic with a chain around the feet. It is not likely that the skeleton would have been put the skeleton would have been put that the skeleton would have been put that the skeleton would have been put the skeleton would have been put that the skeleton would have been put that the skeleton would have been put that the skeleton would have been put the skeleton would that the skeleton would have been put there for a Joke, first, because skeletons are rather expensive, and, second, because there was not one chance in a hundred that it would were be discovered by the country of the

More than 200 people enjoyed a delight ful sail on the Chesapeake last week, when the Eastern Shore Transport Company gave an excursion to Cambridge, that quaint old town on the Eastern Shore, where the visitor can easily find himself in a retrospective trend of mind while visiting places and looking at objects associated with the eighteenth century. The company plans to give two more of these popular excursions this season, tomorrow being the first. A special train will leave Chesapeake Junction at 11 o'clock, making connection with the steamer General Dumont, which will first anchor at Oxford, another Eastern Shore town more than 160 years old, where the visitor will find many points of fixerest. The steamer will return to the Beach in time for the so'clock train back to the city. A fine ride on the bay with a full moon in the evening combine to make the trip a most pleasant one. Meals are served on the steamer.
